ITALIAN DELEGATES EXPECT COLLAPSE OF MEETING THIS WEEK

United States And British Begin New Fight For Success

LONDON, March 24.—With the Italian delegates outspoken in their belief this week will witness complete failure of the five-power naval disarmament conference, representatives of Great Britain and the United States today launched a new effort to bring about a compromise.

Secretary of State Henry L. Stimson, accompanied by Ambassador Dwight H. Morrow and Senator Joseph T. Robinson, visited Prime Minister Ramsay MacDonald at 10 Downing St. for a lengthy conference this morning.

The visit was in the nature of a "desperate effort" to find some avenue of approach to a five-power compromise. Their attempts are aimed at finding some plan which will smooth over the wide differences existing between France and Italy.

While both Mediterranean powers are extremely pessimistic, and have virtually given up hope of the conference achieving anything tangible, it is regarded as likely they will stay on at least until Japan has replied to the tripartite agreement reached here tentatively between the British, American and Japanese delegates.

Reports from Tokyo declare this reply will insist upon Japan's right to transfer 17,000 tons of light cruisers into the eight-inch, or heavy class, giving that nation a 70 per cent ratio of eight-inch gun cruisers.

In addition, it is reported Japan will demand the right to transfer sufficient destroyer tonnage into the submarine class to give her a total undersea strength of 68,000 tons.

French navy minister Louis Dumesnil returned to London from Paris today, and foreign minister Aristide Briand is due tomorrow or Wednesday, thus belying reports the French had bolted the parley completely.

The French will continue their policy of watchful waiting until someone makes a proposal which suits them. They have made it known they have no intention of taking the initiative.

ARTIST TO TESTIFY AT TRIAL OF INDIAN MAIDEN FOR MURDER

Expect Marchand To Be "Key Witness" In Strange Case

BUFFALO, N. Y., March 24.—Henri Marchand, artist and sculptor of international renown, steeled himself today for the ordeal he must go through when he is summoned to the stand this week at the trial of Lila Jimerson, his dark-eyed Indian paramour, who is charged with the murder of his wife.

The gray-haired, distinguished-looking painter of Indian pictures, will be a "key witness" in this strange case. He will be called chiefly for the purpose of establishing the motive of the crime and inasmuch as the finger of suspicion has been pointed at him, his testimony will be closely scrutinized.

Dist. Attorney Guy B. Moore asserts that Lila plotted the slaying of Mrs. Clothilde Marchand, the artist's wife, because she believed that Marchand, who had made love to her when she posed for him, would some day marry her. Mrs. Marchand was beaten to death in her home by Nancy Bowen, a superstitious sixty-six-year-old Indian woman, on March 6 under circumstances still shrouded in mystery. Nancy was a friend of Lila's and was taken to the Marchand home by Lila. She was Lila's dupe, according to the state.

The sentiments on Cattaraugus Reservation, as expressed by Miss Pearl Shongo, a relative of Lila's, is this:

"The Indian people feel that Marchand should have stayed away from this reservation. They nearly all are sympathetic toward Lila and feel sorry for the plight of Mrs. Bowen. If Marchand had stayed away from Lila she never would have been in trouble. She did not go out of the reservation to find him. He came here."

COOPER CONVICTED OF MANSLAUGHTER; MAY AGAIN APPEAL

Jury Deliberates Long Before Case Is Settled

After deliberating seven and a half hours, a jury in Common Pleas Court composed of one woman and eleven men returned a verdict of manslaughter at 6:10 p. m. Saturday in the case of Gilbert Cooper, 50, former Cedarville trapper, charged with first degree murder as an outgrowth of the slaying of Caleb Hitchcock, 23, November 24, 1928.

The manslaughter verdict carries with it a sentence of from one to twenty years in Ohio State Penitentiary.

Attorney F. L. Johnson, defense counsel, announced that he would confer with Cooper before deciding whether to appeal the case to the appellate court.

Cooper has three days in which to file a motion for a new trial and authorities have not indicated when the slayer will be brought in to court for pronouncement of sentence.

A year ago, in January, Cooper was convicted of first degree murder but the jury recommended mercy and he was sentenced to life imprisonment. After being confined in the penitentiary for a year Cooper was awarded a second trial by the Supreme Court.

That Cooper had hoped for a complete acquittal based on an opinion of the Supreme Court that the first three shots he fired at Hitchcock was in self-defense and entirely justifiable under the circumstances, was disclosed by Sheriff Ohmer Tate, who said that Cooper had told him he intended to appeal the case once more if he was convicted a second time.

The jury received the case at 9:30 a. m. Saturday and returned its verdict at 6:10 p. m. It was reported that so many ballots were taken that all available paper was used up and standing votes were taken thereafter.

It is believed the manslaughter verdict may have been a compromise one inasmuch as it was understood that two jurors were holding out for conviction on the first degree murder charge while two others favored a second degree murder conviction.

Anna Poland acted as foreman of the jury.

MELLON WILL ENJOY BIRTHDAY PARTY

WASHINGTON, March 24.—Secretary of the Treasury Andrew W. Mellon did not spend his birthday anniversary at work today, as usual.

Mellon celebrated his seventy-fifth birthday at his home in Pittsburgh where he will be entertained tonight at a small dinner party by a number of personal friends.

As secretary for ten years, serving in the cabinets of three presidents, Mellon has directed the gigantic work of placing the government's finances on a peace-time basis.

When he went into the cabinet there was an enormous public debt, war debts, tax rates that were stifling business and many other outstanding problems for solution. All of them have been met and on his seventy-fifth birthday Mellon is engaged in the effort to bring about a stimulation of business and industry from the blow partially the result of the stock market crash last fall.

EX-XENIAN IS HURT IN HEAVY DYNAMITE BLAST

Mrs. Mary Wharton Is Victim; Two Others Hurt Fatally

Mrs. Mary Wharton, 48, Cincinnati, former Xenian, received injuries about the arms, legs and body late Saturday night, when she was knocked down by the explosion of a double charge of dynamite at Bald Knob, Lehman Road, west of State Ave., Cincinnati. She was treated by Dr. Emil Bludon, Price and Mount Hope Roads.

Mrs. Wharton, who is a sister of Mrs. Willard Bennington and Mrs. Henrietta Logan Shultz, both of this city, had gone to the place of the accident with Mr. and Mrs. Richard Gustafson just before the explosion occurred. Mrs. Gustafson died Sunday evening at the Good Samaritan Hospital as a result of injuries sustained.

A double charge of blasting powder and a faulty rock formation in the hillside caused the charge to blow out the side of the hill toward Lehman Road, instead of exploding upward, it is said.

Amor C. Smith, 34, inspector of the city highway department, was killed instantly by the blast, which also injured four other persons. Three victims are expected to recover. Mrs. Wharton was struck by flying debris and by Smith's body as he was hurled through the air.

AGED MAN PERISHES AS FIRE DESTROYS HOTEL

CLEVELAND, March 24.—Investigation was started here today into the origin of a fire that swept the Hotel Perkins here last night burning to death one man and forcing a hundred-odd residents of the structure to flee for safety.

Firemen said today they believed the blaze, which victimized Wallace K. Pinniger, 75-year-old guide and information clerk at the Federal Reserve Bank, originated in a barrel of rubbish in an abandoned dumb waiter shaft on the first floor.

Pinniger's charred body was found by firemen on the stairs between the second and third floors. He apparently heard the fire alarm and was trapped by the flames while attempting to escape.

Coolness of the residents of the hotel and the prompt arrival of firemen averted a serious tragedy, it was said.

Damages to the hotel were estimated at more than $25,000.

ENGINEER SAVES LIVES OF MANY PASSENGERS AT COST OF HIS OWN

MANSFIELD, O., March 24.—The traditional and heroic story of the "captain who goes down with his ship," today is being told of Engineer C. A. Bell, of Mansfield, who is credited with averting a major railroad catastrophe saving eighty passengers of the fast New York-Detroit Limited from injury or death at the cost of his own life yesterday morning.

Boasting through the darkness of early morning, the train was delayed at a junction, near here. The engine and three baggage cars jumped the tracks and the locomotive buried itself eight feet deep in the soft bank of the right-of-way.

Engineer Bell stayed within his cab, setting the air brakes, which prevented the Pullman cars from piling up on the other wreckage. The air brakes checked the momentum of the Pullman cars and the eighty passengers were only slightly shaken.

Pennsylvania Railroad officials credited Bell with saving his train and declared that the engineer probably could have saved his own life by jumping.

Fireman P. F. Jones, also of Mansfield, was thrown clear of the wreck but scalding water from a bursting boiler of the locomotive seriously burned him. He is in a local hospital.

One man was in the baggage cars which were dragged over on their sides, but he escaped unhurt.

Tracks on the trunk line of the Chicago-Detroit-New York division were torn up for the distance of 200 feet. Only one track was left open and this was occupied by a wrecking train.

Traffic was delayed for eight hours and the Broadway and Liberty, two of the fastest passenger trains in the world, were held up for several hours.

A special crew, armed with shovels and acetylene torches, worked for several hours before they reached the body of Engineer Bell who had been buried with his engine.

Investigating officials declared that a wobbly wheel on a baggage car probably caused the wreck. It was explained that the faulty wheel missed the switch at the junction and started along another track, causing the engine to swerve from the rails.

Charles Hancock, a tower man at the junction, was the only witness. He said there was "a thundering noise" when the locomotive left the rails, above which could be heard the hissing of the air brakes on the Pullmans, which checked their momentum and prevented what might have been a great catastrophe.

SPECTACULAR FIRE DESTROYS STORES, HOUSES IN VILLAGE

Murray City, Ohio, Is Swept By $75,000 Blaze Monday

ATHENS, O., March 24.—A spectacular early morning fire today destroyed five stores and eight residences at Murray City in Hocking County, near here, and did damage tentatively placed at between $65,000 and $75,000.

The conflagration started in the Fred Kinnear confectionery on the north side of main street in the district known as "Little Italy," burned along that side of the street for a block, and then spread across the street to the south side and swept down the other side of the street to a point opposite where the blaze first began.

Fire companies from New Straitsville, Logan, Glouster and Nelsonville helped fight the blaze, which burned for several hours. The water pressure in the pipe line at the village was low and the water had to be pumped from Brush Fork Creek.

An overheated stove in the confectionery is said to have caused the fire.

Eleven families were driven into the streets.

Stores destroyed were the confectionery, the James Smart Hardware Store, the H. S. Sayre grocery and the Bailey Drug Company. Among the residences burned was that of Dr. E. A. Pearson. Three families living in apartments in the drug company building were also made homeless.

The fire aroused the entire population of Murray City and volunteers helped extinguish the fire. No injury was reported.

THREE YOUNG WOMEN INJURED WHEN AUTO WRECKED BY TRAIN

Two Hurt Seriously In Accident At Yellow Springs

Three young women, employed as music teachers in Wilmington and Clinton County schools, were injured, two seriously, when a coupe in which they were riding to Springfield was wrecked by a westbound Pennsylvania Railroad passenger train at an unprotected grade crossing in Yellow Springs about 10 o'clock Sunday night.

The injured teachers are: Miss Margaret Rebecca Hall, 25, owner and driver of the auto, employed as music supervisor in the Clinton County schools, who suffered a fractured right kneecap and serious cuts on the fingers of the right hand. Her home is at 110 1/2 E. Market St., Tiffin, O., and she rooms at 316 W. Locust St., Wilmington.

Miss Marian Woolson, Mt. Vernon, O., music instructor at Wilmington High School, who sustained a broken right kneecap, badly torn scalp and a deep cut over the right eye.

Miss Dorothy Schuk, 23, 729 Clinton Ave., Springfield, music teacher in the Wilmington grade schools, who received minor cuts about the head.

The Misses Hall and Woolson were placed aboard a passenger train and brought to Xenia, where they were removed by polep and Fred O. Lignorance, railroad detective, to Espey Hospital. Miss Schuk, who was not seriously hurt, was taken to her home in Springfield by a passing motorist.

The teachers were on their way to Springfield to take Miss Schuk home when the accident occurred. A line of box cars is believed to have obstructed the driver's view of the train approaching from the east and the crossing was not protected by flash signals or a warning bell.

Dr. L. L. Taylor, Yellow Springs physician, was summoned and gave first aid after the accident.

HANNAH'S STORY IS DISCREDITED WHEN WATER IS RELEASED

Authorities Think Tale Is Another Fake By Prisoner

ORRVILLE, O., March 24.—Another of the many stories of Charles Hannah regarding the missing four-year-old Orrville boy, Melvin Horst, is apparently a fake and a brain-storm.

This was the growing belief here today as discouraged workers groped through the slimy silt deposit on the bottom of the Orrville Country Club pond with dimming hopes that the missing boy's body may yet be found.

From all indications, the drainage of the pond has been just another big "show" in Ohio's greatest mystery. Its director was Hannah, who had declared that the body of the missing lady was dumped into the pond by Earl Conall. The speculators of the "show" were a crowd of some 10,000 morbidly curious persons, who came to the scene, just in case.

At 10 o'clock last night the Country Club pond had been drained as dry as possible, but the bed of the pond showed no signs of anything that looked like a boy's body. Hip-booted men sloshed about in the darkness for a while, poking into the slimy deposit, but they found nothing.

Hopes were fast fading today as more men floundered about the mud, dragging it with grappling hooks. The dreary, cloudy day added no encouragement. It was as if gloom were added to gloom!

Drainage of the pond was begun last Saturday. It was a slow process to drain the waters by the pond's own outlets, and in order to speed the work a pumper from Rittman, O., was pressed into service. Even with this, however, night had fallen before the water—or as much of it as possible—was drained.

One of the most interested spectators when the bottom of the pond was reached was Raymond Horst, father of the lad who has been missing for more than a year. The countenance of the elder Horst registered a mingling of hope and despair, but mostly despair.

The Horsts are moving to a new home in Orrville this week and are taking with them the Christmas tree which has been standing in their front room since Melvin disappeared. The tree, naked of its foliage and stripped of its tattered ornaments will be stored in the basement of the new home.

Despite the fact that the bottom of the Country Club pond has revealed no traces of the missing boy, Hannah today continued to insist that Melvin's body was dumped there. Officials, however, are exasperated at their exasperation will no bounds if Hannah's latest story has proved to be nothing more than a wild-eyed brain-storm.

RAIN--POSSIBLY SNOW--IS NEXT OUTLOOK

(By U. S. Weather Bureau, Columbus.)

A rough of low pressure extends from the west gulf coast northeastward to the lower lake region and dominates weather conditions over the eastern half of the country, except the north Atlantic states, and a high pressure area covers the western half.

As a result of this pressure distribution the weather is warm and unsettled with nearly general precipitation over the lake region and the central valleys. A change to colder has overspread the Rocky Mountain and plains states and is now overspreading the Mississippi Valley, turning the rain into snow in Minnesota and the Dakotas. The general eastward drift of the pressure areas during the next thirty-six hours will be favorable to unsettled, colder weather probably with rain in Ohio tonight and Tuesday, the rain possibly changing to snow flurries on Tuesday.

Mrs. George Kelly, W. Second St., and Mrs. A. D. Roberts of French Lick, Ind., returned home Sunday after spending the last seven weeks in Miami Beach, Fla.

Mr. and Mrs. A. J. Lane, High St., spent the week-end in Shelbyville, Ind., with relatives.

OFFICER SHOCKED AT OBSCENE PLAY

NEW YORK, March 24.—Lieutenant James J. Coy, who in his long career has seen things and gone places, confessed today that he was "shocked" at "The Pleasure Man."

It is for giving this play concerning the "facts of life" that Mae West and fifty-seven other defendants are on trial charged with contributing to an obscene play.

"I have never seen a man sewing before in my life," declared the policeman-witness for the prosecution in a hoarse-stricken voice. Mae and a big diamond on her right hand gazed brightly on the court room scene. The actress varied her midnight black costume with a nifty white-edged black hat. The hat was a cross between a beret and an aviation helmet. Her blonde hair peeked out bewitchingly.

Allen Brooks, who played the part of the "Pleasure Man" was in court for the first time.

PROPOSED FEDERAL JUDGE IS PROTESTED

WASHINGTON, March 24.—A protest against confirmation of Judge John J. Parker, federal judge in North Carolina, a an associate judge to the U. S. supreme court, charging his appointment was influenced by "oil interests," was lodged with the senate judiciary committee today by Miss Mary W. F. Speers, a Washington business woman.

It was the first note of opposition thus far sounded against the appointment. She charged Judge Parker pronounced a decision against her which benefited George D. Pratt, brother of the head of the Standard Oil Company of New York.

The nomination of Judge Parker and Miss Speers' protest were referred to a sub-committee for investigation. The sub-committee comprised Senators Overman (D), of North Carolina, chairman, Herbert (R) of Rhode Island and Borah (R) of Idaho.

NEPHEW OF XENIAN CLAIMED BY DEATH

Clarence Christianman, nephew of J. L. Miller, Church St., died at the National Military Home in Dayton, Saturday.

Poison gas which he inhaled during the World War is believed to have caused his death.

Funeral services will be held at the home and burial will be made in the Home Cemetery.

EAST HIGH NOTES

Negro Health Week will be observed one week earlier this year due to the fact a spring vacation will be given the schools the week of March 30 to April 6, which is Negro Health Week.

The school is observing a program for the week in order to stimulate an interest in the observance of the annual health and clean-up week.

The following program and speakers are arranged:

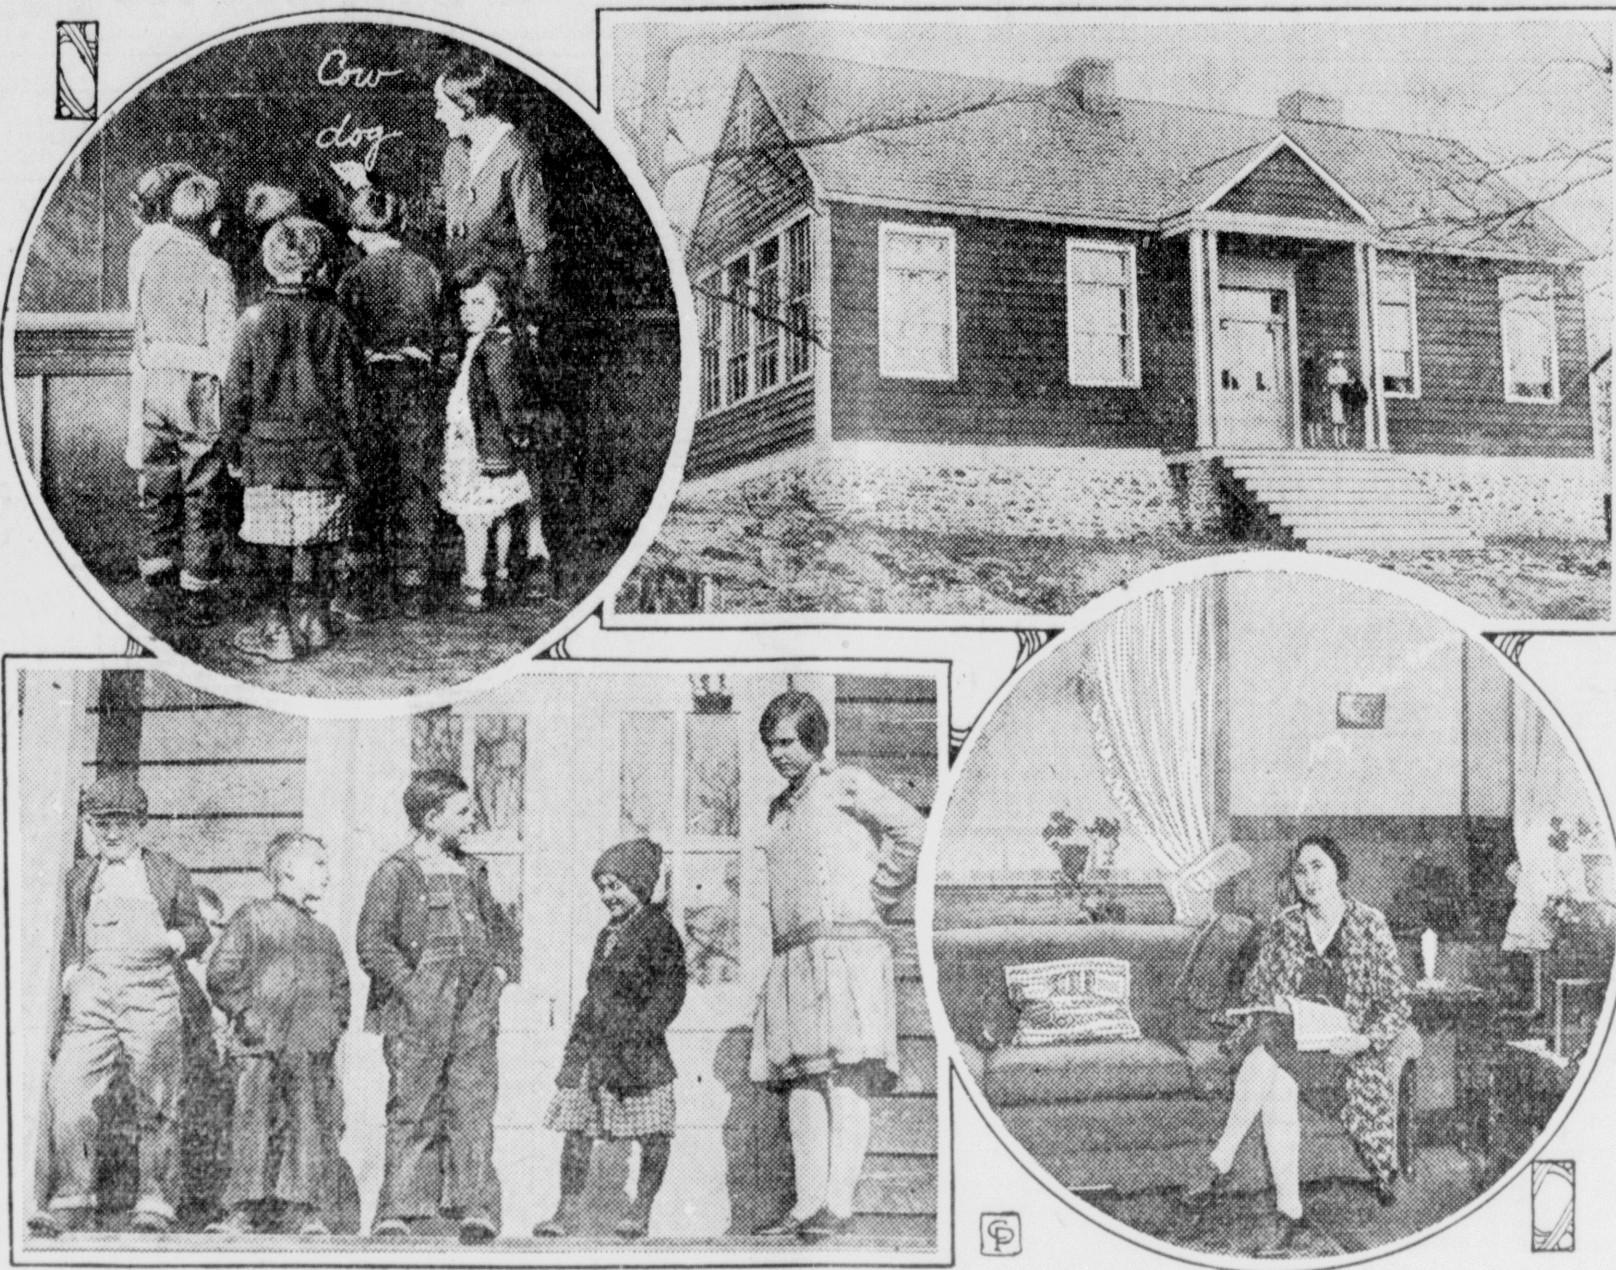

Monday, boys' day, Dr. H. R. Hawkins; Tuesday, "Importance of Physical Education to Health," an address by Mr. H. H. Coruthers, director of physical education at Wilberforce University; Wednesday, talk (informational), "Health," Mr. R. A. Braxton; Thursday, girls' day, Miss G. M. Bolden; Friday, health program, song, school, scripture, Marjorie Kelsey; personal hygiene, Pauline Hudson; solo (instrumental), "Fear as to Hygiene," Joe Brown; solo (vocal), Tuberculosis, Geneva Harden.

The basketball squad consisting of eight players journeyed to Columbus Friday, March 21, to participate in the state Hi Y tournament held there Friday and Saturday.

The junior class is making decided progress on its annual class play, "The Path Across the Hill," to be given next Friday, March 28.

The March issue of the "East High Breezes" was edited by members of the sophomore class. A very creditable issue appeared. If any yearly subscriber failed to receive his issue notify any member of the sophomore class.

Visits Hoover's Virginia Mountain School

Scenes at the school and Miss Christine Vest, teacher.

RAPIDAN, Va., March 24.—No entrance exam worried the twenty-three nice-looking youngsters from six to sixteen years old who compose the student body of the Hoover Community School, given by the president to young neighbors of the famous summer camp on the Rapidan river, near here.

Going through a typical day's session with the class, few members of which ever before had been inside a schoolroom, gives the best possible reasons why that usual formality was omitted both for the regular scholars and myself, who was a student for a day.

In the first place, when the school was dedicated February 24, and the class organized, it was found that none of the children had the same degree of learning. Most of them more than ten years old learned to read and write from their parents or their older brothers and sisters.

Bright, Attractive Children

Far from being unlettered hill-billies, as some newspaper reports would indicate, I found these children to be bright and attractive. But the consequence of living many miles from the nearest public school, in a country where the United States Marines are building the first automobile road, is simply just no school. What education is present has been supplied by members of the families, or was gained before the family moved to the mountains.

The Bell Tolls

Sharp at half past eight o'clock every weekday morning, except Saturday, Miss Christine Vest, the Kentucky mountain girl teacher, rings a hand bell to call her charges.

Ray Barker, the little fellow who sold President Hoover the famous possum and subsequently interested him in the whole group of mountain children, then has the task of raising the national flag to the top of the school flag staff.

All gathered inside, the teacher reads a simple story and they sing a song which some of the pupils already knew. A tall sandy-haired boy, Ray's cousin, Bealy Barker, from over the mountain, arrived at this time the morning I was present, and was assigned to a desk immediately. He is sixteen and has the mountain dignity in full measure. School, I felt, is a serious opportunity for him.

Miss Vest now reads from a book of children's verse and several of her scholars read short poems from the same volume. Then comes spelling. Cat and rat are carefully rendered by the less experienced, while longer words are met and conquered by those with some previous schooling, or who have already been grounded in the fundamentals by their parents.

By this time it is eleven o'clock, and the noon recess for lunch starts. The children living nearby, like Ray and the five of his seven brothers and sisters who attend, go home for lunch. The others eat from lunch boxes, or great handkerchiefs which first serve as the lunch wrapper and then as the combined table cloth and napkin.

Seek Children's Confidence

As part of the goal of getting completely acquainted, she asks, after the arithmetic is over for the day, what the children like and know, and to tell something about themselves. They answer and hurry to queries about books and the proper way to write letters, though to whom the letters are to go remains a mystery.

Then it is half past two o'clock, and the second play recess of the day, the first having been at ten o'clock in the morning. This particular day is so warm that they wear their classroom clothes outside. A real playground is to be ready shortly, but in the meantime the bare ground suffices for some of those age-old games which are still popular everywhere, even in cities. Drop the handkerchief, prisoner's base, "tag," and complicated forms of all three make the half hour short.

The Bell Tolls Again

Eva May Barker (called "Did") now takes her turn with the hand bell to call the others in for the three o'clock posture and language work. A few more brief stories and talk and at half past three school is out. Ray importantly hauls down the flag.

The schoolhouse is a snug building, solidly constructed about a mile above the Hoover camp on the sloping side of the mountain. The Barker house is within a hundred yards while several other houses, some vacant, dot the slope. The school building has a glorious view of the surrounding country for miles.

COOPER GETS 14-YEAR TERM

(Bulletin)

Gilbert Cooper, 50, who was convicted of a manslaughter charge Saturday, was sentenced to serve a minimum of fourteen years and a maximum of twenty years in Ohio State Penitentiary Monday by Judge R. L. Gowdy, who denied a motion for a new trial filed by Attorney F. L. Johnson, defense counsel.

XENIAN LEARNS OF DEATH OF BROTHER

Mrs. Anna M. Haverstick, E. Market St., has received word of the death of her brother, William Bosler who passed away at his home in Santa Paula, Calif., last Thursday.

Mr. Bosler went to California thirty-five years ago from Illinois. He is survived by his widow, Mrs. Bosler, one son, Charles and his sister, Mrs. Haverstick. Funeral services were held Saturday afternoon.

Half of the structure is given over to the large schoolroom. The other half, on the ground floor, is the teacher's roomy apartment, living room, bedroom, bath and kitchenette. The one room on the second floor, the attic, is used by Rida Barker, 15 years old, another sister of Ray, who acts as Miss Vest's companion.

I was the first visitor after the opening day, when the children were so surrounded by reporters that no real work could be done, only the motions being gone through. They showed great interest in the first outsider to share a school day and all waved a friendly goodbye as Ray lowered the flag, they started for their homes, and left the Hoover Community School with a unique, unforgettable memory.

Death Claims Mrs. Thomas Magruder; Burial on Tuesday

Mrs. Margaret Emma Millen Magruder, 82, widow of Thomas L. Magruder, one time leading Xenia attorney, and a daughter of pioneer Xenians, died Saturday night at 8 o'clock at her home, 230 N. Detroit St., following an illness of eighteen months.

Mrs. Magruder was born in Xenia January 3, 1848 the daughter of David Millen and Mary T. Stewart Millen. Her mother belonged to a pioneer Greene County family and was born and reared in the vicinity of Clinton. Her father, with his brother, Eli Millen, came to Xenia from South Carolina in 1834 and with Luke and Mark Connable founded here the meat packing business of Millen, Connable and Co., which was for years a leading enterprise of the Miami Valley.

The Millen brothers also opened and conducted a general store here which was identified prominently with the early growth of the city. The Connables, who with the Millens were among the leading families of Xenia in the latter part of the last century, scattered, Frank Connable, son of Luke Connable, is now vice president of the Du Pont de Nemours Company, Wilmington, Del. In 1877 Mrs. Magruder was married to Thomas Lynn Magruder.

Mrs. Magruder's husband died fourteen years ago. Her nearest surviving relatives are three nephews and a niece: John M. Davidson and Millen Davidson Xenia; Edwin S. Davidson, West Palm Beach, Fla., and Mrs. Emma Davidson Cherry, living near Xenia.

Mrs. Magruder was a member of the First United Presbyterian Church, was affiliated with the Xenia Woman's Club and was past regent of Catharine Greene Chapter, Daughters of the American Revolution.

Funeral services will be held at the residence Tuesday afternoon at 2:30 o'clock and burial will be made in Woodland Cemetery. Friends may call at the residence Monday evening.

PROHIBITION EXTOLLED HERE BY UNION SERVICE SPEAKER

"Too many people are living too close to prohibition to appreciate it, they are not able to evaluate this constructive permanent work of God and mankind," declared Miss Graciele Houder of Australia in a regular union church service at the First M. E. Church, here Sunday evening. The meeting was held under the auspices of A. C. Turrell W. C. T. U. and was in charge of the Rev. W. N. Shank.

Mrs. W. O. Custis introduced the speaker by relating some of the preliminary details concerning the organizing of a Women's Christian Temperance Union here. Her central theme was "Let Us Forget," and in developing it she mentioned some of the early pioneers in this field of Greene County activity.

Miss Houder, an enthusiastic and dramatic speaker in favor of world wide prohibition, held the capacity crowded church auditorium spellbound as she narrated some of the early attempts at state wide prohibition in Kansas and Illinois. She lauded the efforts of such leaders of the movement as Frances E. Willard and Carrie A. Nation, stating that she recently visited the places where these women made their contribution to the curbing of the liquor traffic.

"The world is wondering today what dramatic episode by God will be experienced soon to hold fast and stand by the national prohibition law," asserted the young temperance leader. "World prohibition is at stake depending upon America's answer." The Australian here praised President Herbert Hoover for his stand in favor of law enforcement and for his recent statement in which he declared that only those who violate prohibition are responsible for the lawlessness and crime of this country. Miss Houder further declared that, "If prohibition was not of God it never could have survived these ten past years of severe testing. The moment to defend the cause of prohibition is when that cause is attacked. A philosopher will always defend what he considers the truth when that truth is attacked. It's only reasonable and sensible."

In narrating America's achievement in this nation-wide cause, the Australian scholar and traveler noted that, "Out of the night into the light and out of the wrong to mankind into the light," would sum up the situation as it is present in this country.

After thanking her audience for its usual patience, Miss Houder left this slogan and motto with the congregation, "A thought a day, a prayer a day, a word a day, and a deed a day, for those who are making national law enforcement a reality."

BIBLE THOUGHT FOR TODAY

In the house of the righteous is much treasure; but in the revenues of the wicked is trouble. The lips of the wise disperse knowledge; but the heart of the foolish doeth not so.—Proverbs, xv, 6, 7.

THE "CAN" AGE

The American housewife need no longer stand for hours over a hot stove preparing midday or evening meals if she and her caro sposo are willing to accept the aid and provender of the canners of foodstuffs. They modestly advertise that they have made it possible for her to take down from the shelf and unlock with a can-opener, a well balanced menu from soup to nuts. The boast does not greatly exceed the reality.

With the exception of oysters on the half-shell and the kind of pie mother used to make, we can think of nothing that would be missed from a canned repast; and of the pie, all but the crust can be had from can or jar. Canned fruit is on the market in infinite variety, as are canned fish and fowl, vegetables and viands, soups, sauces and other condiments. Anything and everything except chinaware, cutlery and tablecloth! Whether or not canned foodstuffs provide the same nourishment as uncanned, we leave to the chemists to say; but from personal experience we know that much of it is more palatable than the same dishes prepared by unskilled cooks.

Can and can-opener are the tired business woman's shield and buckler. She lives in a two-by-four apartment, sleeps in an in-door bed, cooks in a kitchenette and eats in a dinette. She can't go out, as her grandmother did, and help in the killing of fresh pork or veal or lamb. She hasn't the facilities for preparing the meat or for keeping it; and neither has she the time. The beneficiary of the canning industry need not be a business woman herself. She may be only the wife of a tired business man, who hasn't enough gumption to give her a home with enough elbow room in it to enable her to broil a chop without simultaneously broiling herself.

We have canned music, canned art, canned literature. Why not, then, canned food? Old fogies in the city who remember cows before they were canned or bottled and who can't look upon a can-opener without being attacked by indignation, will eventually join the topers who couldn't attack themselves to prohibition. The art of cooking will be relegated to canning factory or farmstead, where women have more time and men more appetite. A great future is in store for the canners in this country. A Yankee farmer replied to an inquiring Englishman, astonished at the amount of fruit he saw all about him: "We sell what we can—and what we can't we can." The Englishman later repeated the joke in London. "Americans are remarkable people," said he. "They sell what they can—and what they can't they tin." We seem to be selling less and tinning more every year.

THE NINTH PLANET

Some of the astrologers who prophesy in New York are all het up over the discovery of a ninth major planet. And you really can't blame them. Because, as one or two of them have remarked, the addition of a new globe to the solar system upsets things dreadfully. There are literally scores of thousands of horoscopes that will have to be done all over, and even at the best a whole lot of close guesswork will be necessary until the personal peculiarities, and the size and orbit of the world beyond Neptune have been satisfactorily determined, and that may take a hundred years or so.

In the interim, something may be done, of course, in the way of an increase of accuracy. One "lady astrologer," who admits that she is the best in the field, estimates that she is now going to be able to increase her accuracy ten per cent and she concedes that even the common garden varieties of forecasters will be able to develop a little more reliability than they have possessed hitherto. With the help of the ninth planet, for example, it ought to be possible for almost anyone to avoid the more gross mistakes of the past, such as, for example, the failure back in 1914 to foresee the early advent of a world war.

Yet in a way, the discovery by the scientists at Flagstaff must shake the confidence of the astrologers a little, even while it provides them with an alibi. If there always is to remain a possibility that somebody nosing about with a telescope and camera may conjure an additional planet or so from the vast depths of space, what becomes of the possibility of ever reducing their lore to a condition of exactitude? What will happen, for example, when that two hundred-inch quartz lens gets into action and extends vision through space some three hundred per cent? Suppose somebody picks up the hypothetical planet which some astronomers have insisted exists beyond Mercury in the direction of the sun, and which has even been named Vulcan in anticipation of his advent on the charts? Won't that be rather a hot one for the astrologers to handle?

A Harvard astronomer prophesies that in fifty thousand million years the earth will have rings like those Saturn wears around his waist. Nobody can prove that he is wrong.

The WAY of the WORLD

By GROVE PATTERSON

CARRYING ON

Frank Loope, Seattle, has been bed-ridden for eighteen years. With telephone in easy reach, check book, papers, radio and office equipment he does far more than fill in his time comfortably. Loope directs various enterprises. The phones ring constantly. He is always getting jobs for the jobless, listening to confessions, and helping people in a hundred ways. He calls his business "Sunshine Industries."

"I don't preach, I serve," he says. "The whole thing is a state of mind. A man can make himself miserable by feeling bad for himself. A readjustment of his mental attitude is the first requirement."

One is more interested in learning the personal reactions to his own condition of a bed-ridden man than he is in learning what the man actually achieves for others. How many of us shut off from our ways of activity, could by an effort of the mind and will, re-arrange our lives in such orderly and useful fashion as to stay in circulation and be reasonably happy?

IN WASHINGTON

This is written in Washington. Congress in session and devoting most of its time to filling the dull Congressional Record with conversation. Most interesting thing here is the book collecting by Washington women for the American Merchant Marine Library association. Thousands of books are carried by the limousine load to headquarters. Last year more than 300,000 books were given to 6,000 ships and stations. After a long cruise the books are changed.

Rare book collectors do worthy work by preserving some of the best art in the world. The most useful collectors of all are those who are books to lend and give away. Pass on a book. There may be an idea concealed within its covers.

What is the difference between a snake and a serpent?

As the words are used today, there practically is no difference. Originally "snake" was the broader term, being used to include not only the genuine ophidia, but also many types of lizards, while "serpent" was applied to the ophidia exclusively.

SYNCOPE

What is syncope? The elision of a syllable from the midst of a word, as "ever" for "ever," also a pause or cessation, as for example, a cessation in consciousness—that is, a fainting fit.

HEY!

What does "heyday" mean? Highest vigor; full strength; acme. "Hey" is an obsolete form of "high."

ALUMNI

Please define "alumni." "Alumni" is the plural of "alumnus" (feminine, "alumna"), meaning (Latin) pursuing, foster-child or pupil; one educated at a certain school, especially a graduate.

IT CAN'T BE DONE

Please give the correct pronunciation of Georges Carpentier's name. Georges is pronounced "Zharzh," with the two "zh"s sounded like "s" in "leisure." Georges' last name simply cannot be indicated exactly in English, but approximates "Cahr-pawn-ti-ay." The second syllable ends in a slight nasal; in the last but one the "i" has the short sound and runs rapidly into the last one. Theoretically French is unaccented.

FOREIGN ENTANGLEMENTS

What are the chief objections to America's entrance into the League of Nations? Opponents of American participation in the league point out that this country fortunately is geographically so situated as to be remote from the remainder of the world's jealousies and would simply be drawn into them needlessly by agreeing to take a hand in their settlement.

CAPITAL PUNISHMENT

What states retain capital punishment?—and by what methods? Alabama, Arkansas, the District of Columbia, Florida, Georgia, Illinois, Indiana, Kentucky, Massachusetts, Nebraska, New Jersey, New York, North Carolina, Ohio, Oklahoma, Pennsylvania, South Carolina, Tennessee, Texas, Vermont and Virginia. Electrocute Arizona, California, Colorado, Connecticut, Delaware, Idaho, Iowa, Louisiana, Maryland, Mississippi, Missouri, Montana, New Hampshire, New Mexico, Oregon, Washington, West Virginia, Wyoming and the federal government hang; Nevada employs lethal gas; Utah offers a choice between hanging and shooting; the country otherwise has abolished the death penalty.

Bo-Broadway

By JOSEPH VAN RAALTE

AS USUAL—BLAMING EDITOR NEW YORK CITY New York.—The conductor of a syndicated New York column found it necessary to supply his editor with a photograph of "himself to be used in advertising material."

The conductor was quite plain when he was born and may still be identified by that peculiarity. Like Ed Howe's little girl, he was so darned ordinary, at one time his Maw was thinking of giving him away.

Nor have the Thieving Years dealt kindly with The Lad. Due to an oversight he has neglected to have replaced several front teeth lost in the heat of debate. When he grins, he suggests a broken china closet. His eyes have the tired, worn look of a boarding house sofa. His facial upholstery has shifted in places so that where the contour should outline, like a man's hip pocket, it suggests a clothes line on a Monday night. Taken all in all, he's a pulchritudinal mess.

But he had to forward a picture of himself and, lacking the nerve to face a camera, he dug among his effects and resurrected a photograph taken years ago, before the symphony of life had been dimmed and when the world loomed more like a rose petal and less like a cabbage leaf.

He sent the picture along. The editor looked at it and wrote back:

"Dear Bo: Why didn't you go back a year or two more and send us that one of yourself, taken at the age of six months, sitting crosslegged in a wash bowl?"

An editor with a naturally cantankerous disposition has numerous ways of showing it.

Beginning to Realize He Can't Pick It Up With That Animal

STEWART THINKS G. O. P. HEAD SHOULD BE TAKEN OUT AT ONCE TO STOP "TERRIBLE MASSACRE"

By CHARLES P. STEWART

WASHINGTON.—A merciful referee, if there were any such functionary in the political ring, would stop the fight between Jettett Shouse and Claudius Huston, as a terrible massacre.

Claudius, as the country knows, is chairman of the Republican national committee, and Jettett, virtually is chairman of the corresponding Democratic organization, though John J. Raskob continues to hold the title. It was a shame to put those two in the ring together. Jettett has lambasted Claudius' Republicanism with everything portable. If both of Claudius' arms were amputated at the shoulders he could be no more powerless to land on Jettett's Democratic button or his solar plexus or any other place. There is no joke about it. It is just simply brutal.

This comparison between Messrs. Shouse and Huston, as directors of their respective party committees has nothing to do with any comparison between the parties themselves.

The fact that Jettett is having a glorious time torturing the G. O. P. elephant (because Claudius has not the faintest idea how to protect the poor animal) does not mean that the elephant will not be laughing his head off in due season at what is bound to befall Aunt Democracy when her turn comes. Aunt's tortures will be internal. No Jettett Shouse can save her from them.

At present, however, Mr. Shouse is having everything his own way. He opened up shop in Washington soon after the severe trouncing the Democrats received in November, 1928, with the announcement that he was going to do his utmost to get the enemy on the run by this year's congressional elections.

Pate played into his hands. The Republicans' majority burst wide open in the senate. The tariff has kept them in a turmoil for more than a year. The farmers are still dissatisfied. The stock market went to pieces. Unemployment is unpleasantly rife. Prohibition took a turn for the worse. The naval conference is a bad shape. Things have gone wrong very generally—for the party in power.

What the Democrats needed was a manager to keep hammering away, at every development to the administration's disadvantage—to hammer hard and to hammer incessantly.

Mr. Shouse proved to be the ideal man for this purpose. He got Charley Michelson, a cracking good political writer, to handle his publicity, and the anti-chorus the Democratic committee set up was a caution. Of course it is not so easy to clamor explanations (that is the disadvantage of being the "ins," and consequently on the defensive) as it is to clamor denunciations.

The Republican committee's obvious course was to out-clamor the Democrats. Of course it is not so easy to clamor explanations (that is the disadvantage of being the "ins," and consequently on the defensive) as it is to clamor denunciations.

Diet and Health

Beginnings of Acne
"DEAR DOCTOR: Will you please answer the enclosed questions? May you live a long life and be happy for serving the public so well. I am 15 years old."
IOLA.

Thank you for your kind wishes Iola. Here are your answers.

From your description, it may be possible you are beginning to have acne. Will you write in for our article on the subject, please, for in it I have gone into the subject quite extensively. Meanwhile, stop using the olive oil on your face, but substitute a glycerine solution instead. Scrub your face night and morning with hot water and soap and always follow with the glycerine solution. (Three-fourths water and one-fourth glycerine is a good proportion.) Get a comedone extractor for the blackheads at a drug store, then you won't bruise the tissues so much in squeezing them out. See that your diet is high in fruits and vegetables, one or two glasses of milk a day, and cut out greasy foods, candies and a larger part of your breads and cereals. (You can substitute potatoes for these starchy foods, for they do not leave an acid reaction.)

The lines under your eyes are doubtless "laughing lines," as you surmise. It is normal for all eyes to have a little of the blood vessels showing. If yours show too much, perhaps you are straining your eyes, and I would suggest you visit an oculist.

You are too young to be using rouge. You should have a natural glow from good health.

No, Iola dear, do not wear high heels. They throw the body forward, changing the abdominal pressure so that misplaced organs may result; they make you round shouldered and awkward and may distort your feet and cause accidents. They will also cause bow legs. Truly! Wear a medium heel.

Don't forget the column rules for obtaining our article on Acne. I think it will help you.

E. is 65 years old, and while she is in apparent good health, recently she has begun to have sizzling noises in her head almost constantly.

Most commonly, head noises—buzzing, sizzling, all known as tinnitus—are due to some degree of catarrhal condition in the inner ear. There may be some degree of deafness with it, but not always enough to occasion any discomfort. It is tinnitus frequently worse at night and it may not be present at all during the day-time. Sometimes it will disappear for months and then recur. The patients' hygienic habits must be looked into and corrected so that they are less predisposed to colds, and the nose and throat must have appropriate treatment, which an ear specialist will advise.

Cleason, in his Manual on the Diseases of the Nose, Throat and Ear, states that the systematic massage of the middle ear by the patient himself, is of the greatest value, and is entirely harmless. It may be used and be helpful to the relief of tinnitus. The following is the way to give the massage:

"Automassage with the fingertips is entirely harmless and may be used for the relief of tinnitus (head noises and ringing) whenever it becomes annoying. The finger should be slightly moistened and slipped into the opening with the nail posterior. With rapid piston-like movements of the fingertip inward and outward a patient can easily exercise alterations of pressure and rarefaction of the air within the ear canal, and hence massage the middle ear and drum very thoroughly. It may be instructed to employ the method several times a day with increasing relief of tinnitus. In many instances, and generally improvement of the acuteness of hearing. It is seldom that the method fails to afford at least temporary relief from the feeling of fullness or pressure within the ear."

Living and Loving

By MRS. VIRGINIA LEE

Some time ago a woman wrote, signing herself "Crushed Mother." Her husband had been untrue, of course, and her heart was almost broken. "She stayed with him because of her five children," I advised her to try and keep her home.

Now her husband has written, voicing his grief at his fault, and asking what he can do to make amends. I hope his wife reads his letter. She will see how penitent he is and maybe feel differently toward him.

"Dear Miss Lee: Some time ago my wife wrote you a letter and signed herself 'Crushed Mother.' She told how I had been untrue to her, which is nothing but the truth. But, Miss Lee, is there anything I can do to right the wrong I have done her?"

"She has been everything a man would want or desire in the way of a wife. We have five children. She seemed at times to spoil me, working in the fields and slaving and helping me in sickness likewise. But, somehow, Miss Lee, I have thought of her as cheap, although all my friends admired her and called her a brick. Her kisses were on my lips every morning when I went to work, but now she seems listless and doesn't pay much attention to me, since she found out that there is someone else she wants me to leave her."

"Miss Lee, I want her and no one else, and I know I passionately love her, but it is like beckoning to an angel that is gone."

How To Achieve Beauty

By MME. HELENA RUBINSTEIN

CARE FOR SKIN—LOOK YOUNG

I have talked to you on feeling young. You probably quite naturally asked, "But why feel young, if one does not look young?" Looking young is the sixth key to beauty and may easily be attained by constant and thorough attention to the natural requirements of the skin.

Regardless of how slim you figure or how youthful your mind, your age will "tell" on you. Your face is old. The skin needs consideration and thoughtful care. If you are young, you need to start now against developing the "old" signs of the passing years. Watch out for the danger warnings—crow's feet, the laugh-line which will be a wrinkle at 40, the soft-curved chin which will multiply, a season's sunburn, which may result in permanent sallowness.

These are three principle rules of beauty: First and always keep your skin clean. If it is oily, wash it with a special washing preparation or open pore paste four times a week, and the balance of the time use a cream especially designed for oily skins; if it is dry, wash it twice a week and cleanse with a soft cleansing and massage cream.

Stimulate your skin! Make it work! Keep it active so that it will be clear and fresh and free from the impurities which cause blemishes and pimples. The correct diet, regular and normal habits, fresh air and moderate exercise, and the correct cleansing and treatment of your skin, will youthful it if it has grown old, and will keep it young if no danger signs have yet appeared. Learn to make up to suit your type and coloring. The time is past when actresses and women of leisure were the only women who knew how to bring out and accentuate the best characteristics of their faces. With a small amount of practice, a desire to look your best, you can find the proper rouge and powder for your face and can learn to apply it to the best effect.

Whether you use the cream rouge or the compact rouge, learn to put it on evenly and smoothly. In selecting eye make-up, it is a wise thing to remember that powder can protect and benefit the skin as well as beautify it. An oily in powder while a dry skin needs a fine, light powder made on a cream base, especially blended for just the dry type of skin. The average shades are the best, make-up, with a greater tendency toward mauves which is a warm, peaches and cream tone.

And don't forget your eyes! If your lashes are short and thin, cultivate them. Learn to bring out the beauty in your eyes and to accent their loveliness. A faint touch of eye make-up, such as a little eyelash cream, which is simple, inexpensive, and so effective!

GREENE COUNTY LED STOCK SHIPPERS FOR PITTSBURGH RECORD

The Greene County Co-operative Agricultural Association was the largest factor in establishing a new record for the year at the Pittsburgh market last week. The local association shipped ten decks of stock and was the largest contributor during the week when receipts of co-operative live stock reached a new high total for the year with 41.7 per cent of all the live stock received at the market sold by the Producers Co-operative Commission Association, the farmer-owned co-operative organization operating on that market.

The Greene County organization led seventeen county associations from Ohio in volume of stock shipped that week. Other counties having co-operative stock on the market were Coshocton, Fayette, Knox, Union, Wyandot, Ross, Pickaway, Van Wert, Harrison, Madison, Darke, Wood, Perry, Hardin, Athens and Clinton. The largest single consignors was James M. Cox, former governor of Ohio, who shipped four decks of lambs to the co-operative agency.

Of the 7,820 sheep coming to the market 49.0 per cent was consigned to the co-operative association; of the 8,783 hogs 38.1 per cent was co-operative; of the 1,469 calves 37.3 per cent was co-operative and of the 777 cattle 12.5 per cent was co-operative.

In only one other week since the organization was established at Pittsburgh in 1925 have receipts to the producers association reached this percentage.

Lobbyist Claims $500 Salary from Senator

Warren F. Doane, editor of a high tariff magazine, "The Manufacturer," appeared before the Senate Lobby Investigation Committee and testified that he has a desk in the office of Senator Grundy, of Pennsylvania, and that he has been on the Senator's personal payroll at $500 a month for several years. Doane's sensational charges were the opening testimony in the committee's investigation of charges that Grundy is maintaining an office for the American Tariff League in the Capitol.

However, he was at such an attitude

- that the guide rope could not be caught and it was a minute and a half later before he was brought to earth. PERSEVERANCE Determination Of Young Balloonist Made Dramatic Chapter In Air History

LILIENTHAL IN FLIGHT.

(Editor's Note: This is the fifth of a series of stories relating to the history of aviation from its earliest beginning down to modern flight.)

By BONITA WITT Central Press Staff Writer

A dramatic chapter in the history of the development of aviation is the story of Alberto Santos Dumont, wealthy young Brazilian.

In 1898 he began working with non-rigid navigable balloons at about the same time Count Ferdinand von Zeppelin, German, began building the first rigid airship which was not dependent upon the gas supply for its shape.

Obstacles Beset Path

Many obstacles beset the path of Santos Dumont, who was the son of a rich coffee planter. He had to train his own workmen and do much of the construction himself. His balloon when finished, was 82 1/2 feet long and held 6,300 cubic feet of gas. From this hung a 3 1/2 h. p. motor and two bags of ballast. On his first flight in 1898, at Paris, he misjudged his distance and drove his ship against a clump of trees and damaged it. His second trip was successful.

When his fourth non-rigid ship made many successful trips over Paris, Santos Dumont resolved, in 1900, to build another ship and try for the 4,000 pound prize offered by the French Aero Club, to the first person to fly from the Aere Club park round the Eiffel tower and back to the starting point within half an hour.

Perseverance

His first attempt failed when he got as far as the tower, but developed motor trouble and could not make the return trip. On his second attempt the propeller snapped his suspension ropes. Switching off his engine, Santos Dumont was flung against a building. Luckily the girders carrying the car were supported between two buildings and firemen threw a rope to Santos Dumont whom they pulled to safety uninjured.

The ship was completely wrecked and a new one was built. On this attempt to circle the tower the guide rope caught on a house and the airship began to swing crazily, but some bystanders unlatched it and Santos Dumont continued on his journey. He rounded the tower just nine minutes after the start, but developed motor trouble as soon as he began the return trip. Just as he seemed in imminent danger of being swept back against the tower the engine began firing regularly and he crossed the starting line three-quarters of a minute before the allotted time was up.

Denied Prize

However, he was at such an attitude that the guide rope could not be caught and it was a minute and a half later before he was brought to earth. The crowd became angered when the president of the club announced that the trip had not been completed within the required time. Some weeks later the organization reconsidered and awarded the prize, which the Brazilian divided among the poor of Paris. He then resigned membership in the club as a protest against what he believed to be its unsportsmanlike conduct.

Development of Glider

Among the pioneers who must be considered in a story of the progress of aviation is Otto Lilienthal, who developed the glider. He was the first man to practice gliding in earnest and to study it in relation to its bearing on aerial travel. He had a hill constructed, fifty feet high near Berlin, and made many flights from it. He attached himself to his glider by putting his forearms through padded tubes and holding onto a crossbar. He controlled his flight by shifting his weight. Just before he was ready to test a power-driven machine of his invention, Lilienthal was killed when he became confused while plotting a glider which he controlled by moving a rudder with his head. It is said of him "he was the first man to make the sky his laboratory."

WHOLESALE GROCERS PLAN CONVENTION

Among speakers at the convention will be Carl W. Dipman, editor of the Progressive Grocer, New York, who recently made a survey of the grocery trade which showed that more than 78 per cent of the retail grocery and provision business is handled by independent merchants. S. L. Trumbull, Columbus, secretary of the Ohio organization, will be one of the speakers at the meeting in Cincinnati.

HIGH HAT A RADIO ROMANCE by ALMA SIOUX SCARBERRY Author of "THE FLAT TIRE"

READ THIS FIRST:

Elanda Lee, 23, auburn haired and pretty, after four years' singing over an Atlanta station, goes to New York with WWBC, a radio hook-up. She meets Suwanee Collier, ukulele player, and, scoring jazz, is not so keen about the handsome star, Gregory Du Pont II, son of the owner of WWBC, takes her out. Carmel Prevost, a society girl, is jealous of Elanda, because she wants both her job and Greg. Elanda lives with her friend Dixie Durkin, former chorus girl, and her husband and baby.

NOW GO ON WITH THE STORY

CHAPTER XIII

When Elanda arrived at the studio early there were already several persons there. Musicians tuning their instruments. A few friends and visitors sitting on chairs along the sides of the great room.

In Atlanta she never had known self-consciousness. Finding her niche in New York meant so much to her that she was really frightened.

After the casual manner in which they had taken her voice, Elanda was more than a little pleased that the first program she was to go in was one in which she was to do a solo. The next night she was to be in the light opera chorus.

She thought of Carmel Prevost and her catty remarks, and smiled inwardly at the way the news of her solo would burn her up. She hoped Carmel would be listening in. She would just have to swallow her self-consciousness and sing as she never had sung before. After all her experience on the air it was silly to be afraid.

Several of the musicians spoke to her. There was a slight buzz from the visitors and she knew they were saying:

"I wonder who that is! One of the singers, I guess."

She was proud, and raised her head a little higher and felt important and tried to look cool and indifferent despite the pounding of her heart. She sat down near the piano and in a moment Suwanee came in, swinging his ukulele, and with a big smile on his face. He acted exactly as though their last evening together had been a most pleasing and normal one.

"Hello, Elanda. Early aren't you? I'm going on, too. Anyway, I'd have been here with the old bells on to hear you make your debut. Knock 'em cold, sister."

"I'll try," she smiled at him, gratefully. "I didn't know you were to be on."

"They can't do much without me," he grinned, and drew himself up importantly.

At that moment two girls came over boldly. The darker one smiled engagingly:

"Are you Suwanee Collier? I'm sure you are. I know you from your picture. But you're better looking than your pictures. I didn't know you were so tall."

Suwanee looked self-conscious. Elanda looked the girls over critically. They were beautifully dressed. He made the usual conventional remarks and thanked them for their flattery.

One of them pulled out a little black book.

"Oh, Mr. Collier, would you mind writing your name in here? It would be too sweet of you!"

While he was obliging she smiled at Elanda.

"And who are you—one of the entertainers, too?"

"Yes, I am one of the singers."

"What's your name?"

"Elanda Lee."

"I don't believe I've ever heard of you."

Elanda was not flattered and she did not like the tone of voice. Suwanee took the cue.

"Oh," he said quickly. "You've never heard of Elanda Lee? Perhaps you don't get Atlanta. Miss Lee is one of the most prominent radio artists in the South. She has just signed with WWBC and will be in New York now."

The girls blushed slightly and they went back and found their places. Elanda looked at him gratefully.

"You're a nice flibber, Suwanee. But I'm thankful to you, anyway."

"Nothing at all! I'd do as much for anybody," he turned it off.

Again Elanda wasn't very much flattered. Suwanee had a way about him of doing something very nice. Then assuring her it was just his natural sweet disposition. She liked men to do things because they were doing them for her.

The "Home Folks Hour" was just ready to go on when the door opened and Elanda was surprised to see Carmel Prevost. Behind her was Greg Du Pont. The announcer had just held up his hand for absolute silence—and they slid into chairs near the door quickly.

Elanda felt a sinking sensation in the pit of her stomach. Her heart began to beat coldly. It never had happened to her before. Jealousy. What a strange and unpleasant sensation! She couldn't have analyzed it. She didn't feel angry. Just a beaten, cold sinking feeling—that physically weakened her.

She told herself it was silly. Perhaps Greg was coming up to hear her and had met Carmel accidentally. Certainly that was it. Anyway, why should she feel that way about Greg Du Pont? She knew he had hundreds of girl friends besides herself.

The Theater

John McCormack's first singing picture, "Song O' My Heart" is among the six best pictures of the current month selected by critics of Photoplay Magazine.

Star
Gazing
BY LILLIAN GISH

LILLIAN GISH

Born in Springfield, Ohio, Oct. 14, 1898, is "Elsie Dinsmore" in modern dress.

Doesn't smoke, swear or drink. No one ever has told her an improper story. Never has been kissed on the mouth in a picture. Can't tell when a man is intoxicated. Is a blonde with brunette complexion.

Adores Central Park in the rain, coffee, ice cream sodas, mist, storms at sea, the flowers in a Chelsea garden, mystery melodramas, rural England, sitting in a very low chair at dinner, walking at all times and New York seen through the exhaust of motor cars at twilight.

Detests buttermilk, hot weather, cottage cheese, being stared at, parties of all kinds, people who prattle and plays depicting married women carrying on flirtations.

Paradoxical Maybe
Considers love the greatest thing in life. Never has been married. Likes to roam around the world. Took an apartment for the first time in her life so that her mother could enjoy the comforts of "home."

Is the only motion picture star extant who hasn't gone in for orchids, crinoids and diamond bracelets. Wears only thin strands of pearls for personal adornment. Hates new clothes.

Thinks you can judge a person's character by what he does at twilight.

When in New York always sleeps with cotton in her ears. Always wears white night dresses. Never evening gowns.

Such "Wild" Dissipations!
Has two dissipation—coffee and nibbling on raw carrots. Tastes the "spice" of life in Mexican cooking. Estimates that Victor Hugo's in Los Angeles, Doney's in Florence, Nino's in Paris and Enrico's and the Embassy in New York are the finest restaurants in the world.

"Catches" pictures in a neighborhood theater. Never has been to the Roxy or other famous picture cathedrals.

When in New York, goes to the theater every night. Never leaves her seat during intermission, never exchanges a single word during the performance and never dresses formally, no matter how swanky the premier.

Calls Hollywood, "an emotional Detroit."

Dislikes train travel. Invariably arrives at station just in the nick of time. Loves a journey by plane or boat. Can watch "dat ole debbil" sea for hours at a time.

Unusual! Unusual!
Never has owned an automobile, spoken over the radio, subscribed to a testimonial, taken the blindfold test, been in a beauty parlor or had a sandwich named after her.

Owens a wire-haired fox terrier named Georgie (in honor of George Jean Nathan), which recently was arrested for loitering on the boulevards of New York.

Has three enthusiasms—her mother, her sister, Dorothy, and Mary Pickford. When Dorothy recently made her Broadway stage debut Lillian sent her following wire, "No matter what happens tonight, remember, I still love you."

Has appeared in so many pictures, in which she flutters around in a garden, chasing a bird, that a critic was moved to remark, "I wonder how many pictures it will take for her to catch the damn thing!"

APPOINT BAILIFF

The grand jury for the May term of court will convene in Common Pleas Court May 10, it was disclosed Saturday. Judge R. L. Gowdy has appointed Ed Wilkins, former Xenia Twp. constable, to act as special court bailiff to receive compensation at the rate of $3 each day the grand jury is in session.
